QUESTION 1

The Parson family has strong religious beliefs that prevent seeking medical care for life-threatening problems. When their son becomes sick with a disease requiring hospitalization or the possibility of death, they refuse to seek help. Is this decision illegal?

- A. No, the judicial system is required to respect religious beliefs.
- B. Yes and no. It varies by state.
- C. No, competent parents can make any decision in regards to their children.
- D. Yes, a judge can find a church's beliefs unethical.

Correct Answer: B

A famous case in Utah challenged the Division of Child and Family Services under freedom of religion and the separation of church and state, and the parents won their case. DCFS was trying to force the parents to treat their son's cancer with chemotherapy, and the parents refused, stating that they believed he would be healed by faith. DCFS was forced to allow the parents their religious freedom. In the final outcome, the child did actually go into remission for his cancer despite DCFS insisting that he had to have chemo to do it.

QUESTION 2

Howard Gardner developed the Multiple Intelligence Theory. This model demonstrates and measures capabilities people actually possess. There are 7 original features that Gardner interpreted. The first six include: linguistic, logical-mathematical, spatial, interpersonal, and intrapersonal. What is the 7th feature of the Multiple Intelligence Theory?

- A. Sensory
- B. Bodily-kinesthetic
- C. Emotional-behavioral
- D. Physical

Correct Answer: B

The bodily-kinesthetic feature of the Multiple Intelligence Theory takes into account body movement control, manual dexterity, physical agility, balance, and eye-body coordination. Howard Gardner mentored under Erik Erikson and was highly influenced by Jeanne Piaget, Jerome Bruner, and philosopher Nelson Goodman.

QUESTION 3

Kelly's doctor has concerns about the fluctuation of her weight. She has struggled with diets her whole life but is still 120 pounds over the average weight for her size. The doctor is concerned about symptoms that may indicate an eating disorder. During an examination the physician asked Kelly about her eating habits. The patient appeared to experience shame and distress when attempting to explain. She will eat between meals and often times will consume more than she needs. What disorder is being described by Kelly?

- A. Bulimia

- B. Depression
- C. Binge eating
- D. Anxiety

Correct Answer: C

Binge eating is characterized by episodes of over eating that feel as if they are beyond an individual's control. There is no fasting or purging afterwards, and this leads to obesity. People with this problem often have coexisting psychological problems such as personality disorders.

QUESTION 4

Person-centered therapy places most of the responsibility for treatment on the client. Professionals take a back seat and perform in a nondirective role. Therapy takes place in a supportive environment with a comfortable client/social worker relationship. What are the two goals of person-centered therapy?

- A. Increased self-esteem and openness to experience
- B. Increased self-determination and internal control
- C. Improvement in aggressive tendencies and control
- D. Improvement in attitude and external forces

Correct Answer: A

Person-centered therapy revolves around the goals of self-esteem and experience. Individuals will learn to be in agreement with themselves, demonstrate low levels of guilt, and encounter more positive relationships.

QUESTION 5

Clinical social workers often find themselves in dual relationships. The management of transference and counter transference cannot be ignored. Within the realm of child welfare, administrators play a vital role in what areas?

- A. Modeling, coaching and engaging
- B. Knowledge and training
- C. Education and management
- D. All of the above

Correct Answer: A

Dual relationships occur when clients and clinical social workers relate in more than one manner. Administrators have the job of modeling, coaching and engaging within professional discussions. They should assure proper boundaries are being achieved within the practice of professional standards.
